National Hunting & Fishing Day

National Hunting & Fishing Day recognizes our outdoor heritage and the critical role hunters, anglers, and recreational shooters play in conservation. Federal excise tax dollars on hunting, fishing, and shooting equipment are allocated as grants to state fish and wildlife agencies to benefit wildlife, habitat, and opportunity. With every purchase of this gear, sportsmen and women are funding conservation. Celebrate with us at this free, family-friendly event!

REO
MANHEIM MARKETPLACE

Manheim is a place where entrepreneurs and philanthropists flourish. The first REO dealership in America was established in Manheim Pennsylvania by J. Harvey Spahr. REO stands for Ransom Eli Olds, the creator of the Oldsmobile. At his REO dealership, Spahr sold many REO models, including the REO Speedwagon, the Flying Cloud and the Royale. J. Harvey was known for his philanthropic endeavors, helping many small businesses get started in the Manheim community.

A couple who wanted to see their town turnaround and who embody this spirit are Barney and Suzanne Reiley. In 2016, they purchased the former Spahr's REO dealership and embarked on a quest to bring new businesses to Manheim by creating a unique, walkable destination. With the help of architect and Manheim native Steve Funk and many other talented tradespeople, REO Manheim Marketplace was born.

The first business to open at REO Manheim Marketplace was the REO Suites, two upscale short-term lodging accommodations. With easy access to nearby attractions, the REO Suites are set for leisure and are rich in décor, offering a great place to stay while visiting this quaint town.

Mill 72 Bake Shop & Café was the next business to enter the REO market. Owned by the Miller family, the café was named for both their family history of having operated a local corn mill and for its location along Route 72. Mill 72 offers a wide variety of baked goods, coffee beverages, sandwiches, salads and more.

The next business to enter this piece of history was Prussian Street Arcade. In 1923, Main Street was known as Prussian Street. Over the years, this building housed several businesses, one of which was a duck pin bowling alley. The bowling alley employed young boys to set up the pins and to sit in the rafters to make sure bowlers did not cross the foul line. The arcade portion of the name represents a building with many shops under one roof. Here you will find goods from local craftsmen, vintage collectors and unique handmade items.

Artifice Ales & Mead was the next newcomer to become a part of the complex. Artifice is devoted to crafting the best beer and mead, using local, high-quality ingredients. They offer a wide variety of beverages for all ages and delicious pub fare. Artifice Ales & Mead was founded by the same group who launched Meduseld Meadery in Lancaster in 2017. They host a trivia night every Tuesday and offer a private event space.

Twisted Sisters Ice Cream and Handmade Chocolates was the last business to open at REO. At that time owners Janelle and Justin Carper were not aware of their special connection to the property. They came to learn that J. Harvey Spahr is Justin's great Uncle. What an incredible revelation! Twisted Sisters offers a wide variety of ice cream, handmade chocolates, soft pretzels, acai bowls and a full lunch menu. They also have a private event space and a mobile ice cream truck.

Manheim is quickly becoming a destination for unique shopping, creative experiences and mouth-watering local fare.

After the Civil War, Myerstown was known for the selling and trading of horses. Because of this, a number of ancillary cottage industries sprang up, one of those being the sales of carriages. John Henry Wilhelm was a teacher, a butcher, and also a carriage maker. John Henry began assembling carriages at a location in West Myerstown, and then in 1881 he moved the business to South Railroad St, the original site of Daniel Myers barn. The location included the Jacob Baney Horse Hospital, and upstairs the new invention, the telephone exchange.

For the first twenty years John Henry's business was comprised of carriages, leather goods, horse, cattle and poultry feed, agricultural implements, stoves, carpenter supplies, and butchering tools. In 1904 John Henry built a four story building at 18-20 S. Railroad Street. The first floor consisted of the hardware store, the second floor was an apartment, the third floor was used for meetings, and the fourth for storage. When John Henry moved into his new building he expanded his merchandise offerings by including true hardware, paint, oils and the newest invention, "the machine" (Pa. Dutch expression for automobile).

By 1920's John Henry sold the business to his son, Earl. Earl expanded the business to include radios and housewares. In the late 1920's Earl sold the automobile dealership to Lee Webber. Wilhelm's was fortunate to survive the Great Depression in the 1930's, and by the early 1940's as the country was preparing for war, men would gather 'round the potbellied stove in hot world discussions. Also during this time the store's unofficial mascot, "Butch the Bulldog", would roam the store.

After the death of Earl Wilhelm in March 1947, the business was sold to Joseph Earl Layser who had been a trusted employee for twelve years. In the fall of 1952 Mr. Layser sold the business to Arthur Delong and George Brandt. Each of these owners elected to continue to call the store Wilhelm's Hardware. On Brandt's death, Delong bought full ownership.

As part of that generation called the "Greatest Generation" Delong lived through the Great Depression and fought his way through Europe during World War II. DeLong is quoted as saying "I wished there were more hours in a day". DeLong loved his customers and his business, he loved working twelve hour days, six days a week. This work ethic was what made the reputation for DeLong. By Brian Beamsderfer

Donald R. Brown of Myerstown began to collect picture postcards in 1943 when a shoebox of postcards surfaced at the home of his grandparents in Lebanon, PA. Twelve years of age at the time, Donald and his friend Raymond J. Phillips, Jr. formed a Pennsylvania Post Card Club in Myerstown by 1946. They sent letters with two dimes or a quarter attached, to F. W. Woolworth stores in cities all around America, requesting postcards in return.

The Stouch Tavern is an important location in the history of Womelsdorf and the Lebanon Valley. The original structure is believed to have been built during the 1730's but the interior and exterior date to 1785 when Conrad Stouch purchased the property from the town's first innkeeper Jacob Seltzer. The new establishment was initially named Stouch's Hotel. The arched entrance and bricked courtyard at the southeast corner of the building is one of the few surviving examples of European Colonial architecture left in the United States.

Distinguished guests that have lodged here include the last proprietary Governor of Pennsylvania John Penn on April 9, 1788. President George Washington spent the night here on November 13, 1793 while traveling to neighboring Dauphin County (Lebanon). He was on his way to inspect the progress of the financially troubled Schuylkill and Susquehanna (Union) Canal between Myerstown and Lebanon after the work stoppage.

In 1797 Conrad became partners in a stagecoach line operating between Reading and Harrisburg. The Stouch-Calder Stagecoach used Stouch's as a hub until 1840. For 112 years from 1797 until 1909 Stouch's was a place for people to vote for political office. In 1807 the first post office west of the Schuylkill River in Berks County was at the hotel and Conrad became the first postmaster. Stouch's was owned by members of the Stouch family until 1856.

A fire in 1973 nearly destroyed the old building, but a very careful restoration including moldings and flooring from period structures and original exposed beams result in what you see today. Ownership of the Stouch Tavern has changed many times over the centuries but serving excellent food and drinks has been constant throughout the years. By Daniel Allen Ebling

John B. Stohler (right), a famous axe maker, stands outside his blacksmith shop in the village of Johnstown, two miles southwest of Schaefferstown, about 1914. Neighbor Harry Sechrist stands in the doorway. The axes produced here were nationally known—stamped by hand and valued because of their durability. Stohler made axes here until his death in 1920. As of 1992, axes continue to be made by a descendant but are produced from a mold, not hand-stamped.

Lillian Isenberg (second row, third from left) guided the Myerstown High girls to a second county basketball championship in 1924–1925 before becoming Mrs. Edgar N. Bahney. In 1981, Lillian Isenberg Bahney was elected to the Pennsylvania Sports Hall of Fame.

The Institute of American Deltiology, a postcard research center was founded by Mr. Donald R. Brown in 1993.

Four interesting images were chosen from the book, Postcard History Series - Myerstown and Eastern Lebanon County - by Donald R. Brown, to show what was happening.
